researchers said that reflects a greater understanding that kids often don't grow out of adhd and that symptoms can persist through adolescence and even adulthood.

different types of treatment options are:

right after we all arrived in paintsville, paul brought the whole team to the station and had each of us record to promote the team